Q I've been told that Utah is a great destination for skiing this year. Which of the resorts there is best for a mixed-ability group, and are there any good accommodation deals to be found?

Ed, 34, Bristol

A I'd recommend Park City. More than 60 per cent of the terrain is great for beginners and intermediates, and perfect for improving powder skills. If you're a thrillseeker, head to McConkey's for some serious steep and deep runs, and find that legendary Utah powder in Jupiter Access. You can get great deals in January and February but avoid the Sundance Film Festival (January 20-30), when prices and lift queues triple. Get ten nights for the price of seven at the spacious Park Avenue Condos, just one minute's bus ride from the lifts, or ten nights for the price of eight, plus American breakfast, at Park City Peaks.

Q I've been inspired by Katy Perry and Russell Brand and am considering getting married in India. How easy is it to arrange a wedding there and would I need a wedding planner? I'd like a glamorous but relaxed ceremony and party for around 30 people.

Jo, 28, London

A Many Indian properties, especially around Rajasthan and Goa, are beautiful spots to tie the knot. Reputable travel companies in Britain will be able to recommend the best hotels for all 30 of you. Sri Lanka is a great alternative. Reef Villa is an intimate manor house with the right amount of old colonial atmosphere. With just a handful of rooms, you can take over the whole place. But with any weddings abroad, the legalities can get quite tricky, so I'd suggest having the legal part at home and the ceremony in India.
